APPLYING FOR A JOB AS A NEWCOMER IN CANADA

A lot of newcomers are worried about finding the right job in Canada. One of the most important things to keep in mind when applying for a job in Canada is to make sure that your resume as per Canadian standards and guidelines. Your resume gives the first impression of you, so make sure it is crisp, formal, and to-the-point.

If you are a newcomer in Canada and are looking for a job, here are a few ways which can help you –

- Go to job fairs in and around your city
- Ask your friends and family for references
- You can make use of an employment agency to find the best job for yourself
- Research online for companies that you wish to work for – check their social media and website for job openings
- You can also browse popular job search website in Canada like -
 - <https://www.jobbank.gc.ca/findajob/newcomers>
 - <https://www.canada.ca/en/services/jobs/opportunities/government.html>

Once you find a job that you're interested in, the next step is to apply for it. It would be best if you network around, get accretions required as per your skill and job, and even work as a volunteer to build your resume before you get a new job.

In Canada, federal and provincial laws are quite strict and provide a lot of benefits for employees. It would be beneficial for you if you get to know the rights of employees and each province may have a different set of laws and rules.

If you are unemployed in Canada, you may be eligible to get employment insurance. It gives your short-term financial help to upgrade your skills while you look for a job.

DOCUMENTS NEEDED

To apply for a job, you mainly need –

- Resume
- Cover letter

If you are selected as a candidate, each individual company gives a list of documents that you need to provide them upon joining.

There are high chances that you would have to improve your French and English skills to get the best jobs in Canada. You can select from the various language courses available online.
