GETTING SOCIAL INSURANCE NUMBER (SIN) AS A NEWCOMER IN CANADA

If you planning to work or study in Canada, you need to get a Social Insurance Number or SIN as it is popularly known as. It is a 9-digit number. Service Canada is responsible for issuing SINs, which comes in a paper format (Confirmation of SIN letter). If you have a plastic SIN card that has not expired, it is still valid.

ELIGIBILITY

- Ensure you are eligible to apply for a SIN. Generally, you must be a Canadian citizen, a permanent resident, or have a valid work or study permit.
- Temporary residents (such as international students or foreign workers) need to provide a valid permit that authorizes them to work or study in Canada.

DOCUMENTS NEEDED FOR SIN

You will need to fill out the SIN application form provided by Service Canada. The form will have your personal information, declaration of eligibility, contact information etc.

- Proof of identity
- Proof of legal status in Canada
- Permanent residents need to show their – Permanent Resident Card
- Temporary residents will need to show either – Canadian work permit or Canadian study permit.

Once you have gathered the form and all the required documents, you need to visit a Service Canada Centre in person to submit your application. After completing the submission, you can keep an eye on the official website to get all the latest updates.

- Registering a newborn

If your newborn is under one year of age and you have not registered your child's birth with your province, you can apply for your child's SIN through your provincial Newborn Registration Service.
